TERRORISM ESCALATES.

~~(S/NFD/NDA/BUO/CD/WNSISMI)~~ The recent increase in political violence could prompt the military to intervene in the government, especially if the economic and political situation deteriorates further.

~~(S/NFD/NDA/BUO/CD/WNSISMI)~~ The stepped-up terrorism may represent the beginning of joint operations by the leftist-oriented People's Revolutionary Army and the Montoneros. Elements of the two organizations left a note at the scene of their first known joint operation that took place in Buenos Aires on 18 August. At that time, they killed an army captain and stole a military vehicle loaded with weapons and ammunition. The document claimed that the groups had joined forces in retaliation for the murder on the 14th of the immediate family of a deceased leftist by a new right-wing terrorist squad. The guerrillas' proclamation also stated that they would continue their killings, which would be primarily directed at military and security personnel.

~~(S/NFD)~~ No information has been received on the existence of the new rightist terrorist organization -- called the National Justicialist Restoration Command -- but its tactics and victims lend credence to the theory that it is the Argentine Anticommunist Alliance operating under a new name. In any event, Argentine law-enforcement officials are disturbed by the 14 August murders because of an apparent abrogation of a mutual understanding between terrorists and security forces that victims' families would not become targets. Fears are now being expressed that last week's killings presage a rash of such incidents by both leftists and rightists. ~~(XGDS-2 Declassify upon notification of originator)~~
